

A love letter to architecture, this novel is set in the dazzling and eccentric world of the star architect.

After the death of her architect husband Charles and the discovery of intimate correspondence with another woman, Gaia Ore is about to learn some harsh but rewarding lessons on the nature of erotic and artistic obsession. A competition emerges to design her perfect home, and the private world of international architects is opened up. Flowing between Spain, Italy, the US and the UK, four world class architects – Charles' former adversaries – take up the challenge. But will they truly understand what is required of them? Accustomed as they are to large scale projects such as skyscrapers, bridges, museums and galleries, will the request for a modest dwelling ultimately get the better of them?

A joyous and life-affirming read filled with warmth and humour... and a house!

Having lived and worked in Japan and China, Jayne Joso now lives in London. Perfect Architect is her second novel.
